

Megan Rix is an award-winning author of historical and contemporary children's novels about animals, and a Sunday Times bestselling adult memoir. Under her given name, Ruth Symes, she has written children's picture books, novels and TV scripts.

Megan shares her passion for animals and for history with frequent book tours, school events and literary festival appearances, usually accompanied by her dogs Bella and Freya, who demonstrate the work that trained assistance dogs do.

A former special educational needs teacher who has herself lived with hearing loss since childhood, Megan is a proficient lip-reader and often incorporates BSL sign language into her events.

“A fascinating read that is both thrilling and educational.” – The Guardian

“If you love Michael Morpurgo, you’ll enjoy this.” – Sunday Express

“A perfect story for animal lovers and lovers of adventure stories.” – Travelling Book Company

“I never liked reading until one day I was in Waterstones and I picked up some books. One was ... called The Bomber Dog. I loved it so much I couldn’t put it down” – Luke, aged 8

“I found this book amazing” – Nayah, aged 11

“One of my favourite books” – Chloe, aged 12

Praise for Ruth Symes

“I have been writing children’s books for more than thirty years but I learned something from this talented newcomer.” – Antonia Barber on The Mum Trap

“An engaging text ... Warm, woolly whimsy prevails when Wendy, a sheep, interrupts her grass eating to rescue a fairy ... Few collections have too many books with flying sheep that have rescued fairies, and this one may be just the ticket.” – School Library Journal on The Sheep Fairy

“The story's sweet simplicity and familiar fantasy elements earn top marks for humor and child appeal.” – Booklist on The Sheep Fairy

“A funny and sensitive story on an ever-relevant topic to which we can all relate.” – Carousel Magazine on Mondays at Monster School
